Second International Conference on Priorities In Health Care

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre,
Westminster, London SW1, UK.
Thursday 8th - Saturday 10th October 1998

Following the success of the first international conference on Priorities in Health Care, held in Sweden in October 1996, the 1998 conference is jointly organised by the British Medical Journal, the King's Fund, and the Health Services Management Centre at the University of Birmingham. Open to all, this multidisciplinary conference is aimed at physicians, nurses, managers, other health professionals, politicians, civil servants, patient organisations, health care economists and anyone else interested in the difficult and complex problems which the subject of priorities in health care entails.

The aims of the conference are:

1. To help those responsible for running health services develop effective mechanisms for setting priorities
2. To share worldwide experience on setting priorities in health care
3. To provide a forum for the presentation of results of new research on setting priorities in health care
4. To raise public and professional consciousness on the inevitability of having to set priorities in health care
5. To provide a platform for the development of an international society of priority setting in health care

Abstracts are invited for presentation, or posters for display, on any aspect of priority setting. All proposals will be reviewed by an international panel of prominent members within the priority setting field. The language of the conference will be English, and translation facilities will not be available.
